

Bible Prophecy Focused On Present, Group Told

"Long before our time, 20th century events were recorded in Bible prophecy," declared Mr. Theodore Jaracz to 2644 of Jehovah's Witnesses assembled to hear the main address of a three-day meet at the Washington High School in Los Angeles.

"The apparent lack of appreciation of Bible prophecy in our day," said Leonard Olliff, the Presiding Minister of the Torrance Congregation, "was accented by Mr. Jaracz when he said, 'While the Bible spotlight of prophecy is focused on this 20th century, the majority of mankind is not aware of it. Many modernist clergy claim the Bible is a piece of beautiful literature that has served antiquity but does not belong to a modern society.'"

MR. JARACZ defined prophecy as "history written in advance, a foretelling of future events beyond the power of natural man." In disclaiming that any human has the ability to privately interpret prophecy, he quoted what the Bible writer, Peter, was inspired to say at 2 Peter 2:20, 21 and added: "God is the interpreter of prophecy and makes it known to his people to be studied and understood. We merely proclaim it."

Olliff further stated, "Jehovah's Witnesses are eager to share with the people in the community the things learned from this assembly and will be making personal calls with the 51 new ministers who symbolized their dedication to do God's will by water baptism at this assembly. We join with Mr. Jaracz in encouraging all to become students of Bible prophecy, to watch intently the sign of the times and recognize the prophecy's further fulfillments."

... Report From the Holy Land

Many Americans visiting the Holy places are shocked at the commercialism practiced in many of the shrines. The places marking the Manger and the Tomb are hidden away in elaborately garrish churches with ornate trappings that in no way symbolize to us the magnificent simplicity and purity of the Man they are supposed to memorialize. But this is only our opinion and one that certainly does not seem to be shared by hundreds and perhaps thousands who seem to find the shrines altogether fitting and rewarding.

For thousands past 50 in the refugee camps there seems to be little hope as most of them have lost the ability to practice what trades they once knew. For the children, however, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees is providing vocational training that will fit them for a new life. Students sent to other countries from the camps are making good records and there are more rehabilitation schemes for which the UN has already allocated $11 million.

In several of the camps the YMCA has set up headquarters and is achieving a record of service to teen-agers, some of whom were born in the camps as part of a formidable birth rate that has officials worried.

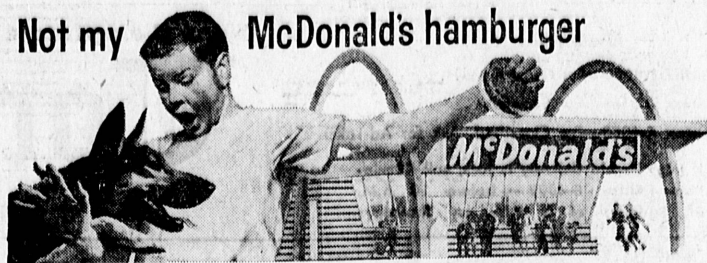

Most of the buildings housing the refugees appeared to be an improvement over many of the hovels in Jerusalem. But, as one former Minister of Defense for Jordan pointed out: "no man is happy if he is not in his own home though it may be humble indeed."

The market places and bazaars of Old Jerusalem, at least to the tourist, seem to be preserved or reconstructed to appear as they did when Christ and his disciples walked their cobblestone pavements. Only the product, for sale differ, but one can still see the cave-like bakeries where bread is produced in ancient ovens.

We walked the Seven Stations of the Cross now marked by inscriptions carved in the stone of buildings along the route traveled by Christ as He struggled with the burden of His own instrument of destruction.
